REAR ADMIRAL BRAINE

One of the Heroes of Fort Fisher Is Dead.

Was in the First Naval Engagement of the War—Long and Honorable Career Closed.

New York, Jan. 29.—Rear Admiral Daniel Lawrence Braine, retired, U. S. N., died at his residence in Brooklyn this afternoon. He had been under the care of a physician since Friday night for heart trouble. He leaves a widow, who was Miss Mary E. Fulton, of Brooklyn, three sons, two of them married, and a daughter.

Rear Admiral Braine was born in New York on May 18, 1829. He entered the navy in 1846 as a midshipman, appointed from the new State of Texas, where he had lived for a year. He served through the Mexican war, saw service on the great lakes, and made two cruises before he graduated from Annapolis as a passed midshipman, in 1852. Before the opening of the rebellion his service carried him to the Mediterranean, to the southern coast of this country on survey duty, to Africa, to capture slaves, and in 1861 he had advanced to the rank of lieutenant.

He was appointed to the command of the Monticello, which the Union defense committee sent to sea in forty hours to provision Fort Monroe. He was in the first naval engagement of the war and saw heavy service all through it. He was recommended for promotion for his cool performance of his duty at Fort Fisher, Fort Anderson, and the fort of Cape Fear river, and was commissioned as commander in 1866.

He was in charge of the Ordnance Equipment Department of the navy yard at Brooklyn, from 1869 to 1873, in which year he commanded the Junata in her search for the Polar in the North and on the trip to Santiago de Cuba, where the 102 Virginian prisoners were received.

He was made captain in 1874 and commander in 1885. He commanded the South Atlantic as rear admiral in 1886. In 1889 he was appointed to command the Brooklyn navy yard and in 1891 he retired at the age of sixty-two. He had lived in Brooklyn since that time.

HAIRY DEPOSED.

He Is No Longer a Member of the Democratic Committee.

The expected, with respect to Mr. William F. Harty, of Pennsylvania, has happened. He is no longer a member of the National Democratic Committee. He was formally deposed Saturday by Chairman Jones, of the national committee, and Col. James M. Guiley, of Pittsburgh, substituted as the member for Pennsylvania.

It has long been a question whether any power other than the delegates to a national convention can change the personnel of a national committee, but the question has never been definitely settled, and a precedent is established by the action of Chairman Jones. Mr. Harty was selected by his State delegation at Chicago, but it is well known that he never affiliated with the regular organization after the adoption of the Chicago platform.

On several occasions this action was urged upon Chairman Jones, but never until recently was the matter so persistently pressed, and the chairman could no longer delay action. He reached the conclusion resulting in Mr. Harty's deposition after a conference with Senator Gorman, Representative McRae, of Arkansas, and other members of the national committee, with whom he was able to communicate. During the week the Senator also had a conference with State Chairman Gorman, of Pennsylvania, ex-Lieut. Gov. Chauncey F. Black, Col. Guiley, John B. Larkin, and other Pennsylvania Democrats, all of whom insisted that the best interests of the party demanded that Mr. Harty be removed, and Col. Guiley substituted.

As a result of this conference Chairman Jones decided to act promptly, and he issued a statement removing the gold Democrat and recognizing the choice of the regular organization. Notices of this action have been sent to the members of the committee, and they have been requested to recognize Col. Guiley as the member from Pennsylvania, as he has been recognized by the chairman. From now on the new member will be recognized as Pennsylvania's representative on the committee, and all communications dealing with the business of the committee will be sent to him instead of Mr. Harty.

The new member of the national committee is not a stranger in Washington. He has had the influence of several of the leading men of the party in his fight, prominent among them being Senator White, the recently elected chairman of the Congressional Committee. Senator White and the other leaders have long thought that some one in thorough sympathy with the organization should be put in Mr. Harty's place. The contest was extended over a period of several months, and silver Democrats will be pleased to know that it has been settled in so satisfactory a manner. There will be no meeting of the national committee until just prior to the next convention, but the recognition of Col. Guiley by his associates and the ignoring of Mr. Harty will give him a good deal of trouble, as though he had been elected by the delegates. There is little doubt but that the action of Chairman Jones will be sustained.

THE SNOW STORM.

It Extends From New England to South Carolina.

As the Weather Service sat on an icy throne congealing his flakes of snow, he summoned a wind from the frozen north which accounts for last night's blow. "The drift of my thoughts are to drifting snow," he mused, as he chuckled with glee, "and I'll cover old earth with the beautiful—I'll go on a jamboree."

And then the Sage got down to business. "Don't bother me," he said, to a reporter, who came in on a polar wave, "I'm engaged."

"Do you think tomorrow will be a cold day?" queried the newspaper emissary, with his eyes on the Sage, and his thoughts on a pair of yarn socks like mother used to knit.

"Nix!" responded the Sage, as he considered a consignment of goods to a pneumatic tube, and pushed it along.

"That," he continued, cheerfully, "is the snow. Perhaps you have heard that driven snow is white—so am I, and therefore I don't mind telling you the facts about this snowstorm. Outside of the fact that the snow is white, the Republican party, whose 'Car' proposes to shut off debate in the House tomorrow, the day will not be cold. I am informed you will readily understand that a storm central over the Republican party, only is neither broad in scope nor terribly disastrous."

"Well, I'll be bound," said the reporter, "the snow has long on the ground," queried the reporter.

"I prefer to reserve my prophecy on that point until after it has melted," grinned the Sage, as he resumed his business of shuffling down the stuff on which John G. Whittier's fame largely rests.

"Well, I'll be bound," said the reporter, "the snow has long on the ground," queried the reporter.

"You won't if you make a quick sneak and get out of here half as soon as I hope you will," declared the Sage. "I don't want to get into any hot water with business and not wishing to offend him The Times man left, after learning that the snow-belt extends from New England to South Carolina, and as far west as the Rockies."

HICKERSON MAY DIE

The Victim of the White Lot Fight Dangerously Hurt.

The Police Arrest His Alleged Assailants—The Men Quarreled Over a Wrestling Match.

Harry Hickerson, a steel cutting maker, twenty years old, whose home is at No. 420 K street northwest, lies at the Emergency Hospital in a semi-conscious condition suffering from what the physicians fear are internal injuries, which may result in his death.

Hickerson is the young man who was taken from the White Lot to the hospital while unconscious early yesterday morning, having been beaten and kicked. It is alleged, by two men, John E. Shaw and William Weller, who are now locked up at No. 1 station.

It developed yesterday that the two men, who claimed to have heard Hickerson's groans, and who went to the Emergency Hospital for help, were Edward Minnis and a man named Cline, who were really with Hickerson and his two assailants.

Each of the five young men attended the performance at the Bijou Theatre on Saturday night, and after the performance, it is said, went to Burke's saloon at Thirteenth and a-half and D streets, where they drank until the bar closed at midnight. A bitter quarrel arose over the merits of the wrestlers at the Bijou, and, acting up on the suggestion of Weller, Shaw and Hickerson agreed to go to the White Lot and fight. It is said that Shaw struck the first blow, which felled Hickerson to the ground, whereupon Shaw said to Cline, "Kick him." Cline then kicked Hickerson several times in the abdomen and chest. The part which Weller took in the affair is disputed, and he is held as an accessory.

Upon learning of the case, Sergeant Moore, of the First precinct, located Shaw in the Third precinct, and telephoned to Sergeant Keefe to arrest the doctor's desk, apparently by search of valuable papers, and deliberately started a fire in the parlor directly under a large oil lamp. She left her two children, five and nine years old, alone in the house to perish. The older boy extinguished the fire.

The woman's name has been unpleasantly connected with Sam Dungan, the ball player.

THE WEEK IN THE HOUSE.

After the Teller Resolution Will Come Appropriation Bills.

Legislation that will attract the greatest general interest, to come before the House this week will be on the Teller resolution, to be disposed of today. The rest of the week will be devoted to appropriation bills, except on Friday, which is under the rules, private bill day. The district appropriation bill can be disposed of on one day if the attention of the members is given exclusively to it, but this will not be done, and time will be consumed in the committee of the whole by speeches in the condition of the country and the apparent want of prosperity, Cuba and free silver.

Immediately following the district bill the appropriation bill for forts and fortifications will come up, and it will probably be carried along to the last of the week, and perhaps into the week following.

WILTON'S CAVE DWELLER.

Residents Interested About a Good Looking, Intelligent Hermit.

Norwalk, Conn., Jan. 29.—Wilton has a cave dweller. He is a good looking fellow, of thirty-five or forty years, with dark hair and mustache, well and warmly dressed, and recently had new hip boots. He has resided in a small cave, under the shadow of a big bowlder, about half a mile from the Cannon railroad station, all this week, keeping up a constant fire of wood, of which there is abundance near, and subsisting on whatever he can forage in the neighborhood.

He will tell nothing of himself to those who approach him, but is not sparing of words, most of them abusive. A resident of Cannon called on him this morning. "I saw a fire over here and thought, 'I'd come over and see what was going on,'" he remarked, pleasantly.

"You knew well what was going on," was the reply, and the further conversation became too warm for the visitor's liking.

AMERICAN CARS FOR AFRICA.

Orange Free State Railway Company Places a Big Contract.

Bloomington, Pa., Jan. 29.—The Bloomington Car Manufacturing Company of this city has been awarded the contract to build 100 gondola cars for the Orange Free State Railway Company of South Africa. These cars will be equipped with entire steel frames and steel tired wheels.

For the same company fifteen passenger cars are to be fitted with forty inch steel tired wheels and will be similar to an American passenger car, excepting a little smaller. These will be the first cars of this description built in America for use in Africa.

TRAMWAYS OVER CHILKOOT.

Opening of New Methods of Alaska Transportation.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 26.—The Chilkoot Railroad and Transportation Company has received advice from Dyea that its tramway over the Chilkoot Pass was to be placed in operation today, transporting freight in one day from Dyea to the headwaters of the Yukon at Crater Lake.

Last night the company signed a $60,000 contract at Victoria, with Major Perry, representing the Canadian government, for the transportation of supplies for the mountain police over the pass at fifteen cents per pound, which price all packing will be reduced. The opening of the tramway marks a new era in Alaska transportation. There is a horse tramway for eight miles, and after that two aerial tramways extending eight miles from Dyea Canon over the summit to Crater Lake.

SOUTH VS. NORTH.

New England Cannot Compete With Her Rivals.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 26.—Col. D. A. Tompkins, the millionaire cotton mill owner, who, perhaps is better informed on matters pertaining to this industry than any other Southern man, said today in reference to the present New England situation:

"The New England mills are suffering because they cannot sell their products at a profitable price. The Southern mills are underselling them, not because they like to sell goods cheap, but because in order to sell at all, they are obliged to cut New England prices. This condition is not agreeable to the mills of either section. It makes the appearance that Southern competition is becoming ruinous to the New England mills."

They and those of the South need better markets. There are some conditions here more favorable than in New England for the production of cheaper goods. Therefore if the competition is reduced to that point where it is a question of survival the South-ern mills can probably hold out about as long as those in New England. Any improved condition which puts the manufacturers of cotton in the Southern States, however, on a better basis would make a very satisfactory condition in New England. The trouble is that the condition of cotton manufacture in all parts of the United States is very much depressed."

ANGRY WOMAN'S VENGEANCE.

Attorneys Brought Against a Detroit Physician's Wife.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 29.—The police are searching the city for Mrs. W. D. Quistman, wife of a well-known local physician, who has sued for divorce. It is alleged that the woman visited the family residence this evening in the absence of the doctor, rifled the doctor's desk, apparently by search of valuable papers, and deliberately started a fire in the parlor directly under a large oil lamp. She left her two children, five and nine years old, alone in the house to perish. The older boy extinguished the fire.

The woman's name has been unpleasantly connected with Sam Dungan, the ball player.

A Bicycle Novelty.

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

A Hamburg firm has just introduced a bicycle novelty in the shape of a music box attachment, which finds its place in front of the steering gear and is set in motion and kept going by the front wheel. Besides the amusement the music box is made to serve another end—that is, the regulation of speed. The music sounds melodious only while a speed of nine miles or less per hour is maintained; as soon as the speed is increased above that limit the sounds from the music cease to be agreeable to the ear and become inharmonious.

The music box indicates, therefore, fairly well when the exercise is becoming dangerous to the rider's health. The tin box containing the works is about ten inches diameter and four inches deep. The transmission is connected with the front wheel so as to allow for vibration or concussion. It can be started or stopped by means of a little lever attached near the handle. The same transmission serves to actuate a cyclometer which works independently of the music box and registers the distance traveled.

LETTING THE CAT OUT.

(From the Syracuse Standard.)

There were three sisters who lived very badly, and their mother, who was solicitous about finding husbands for them, was continually admonishing them to hold their tongues. One evening the three sisters were invited to "a quilting" at a neighbor's.

"Now, mind, girls," said the anxious mother, "be nice. Young men are going to be there, and you must not say a word, or they will learn that you lip and won't care to make 'up to you'."

They promised to be silent, and went to the quilting. When they reached the house they sat down and quilled diligently in silence, and nothing could induce them to take part in the conversation. At last the eldest wanted the scissors, and tried to make signs to her next sister to pass them to her, but could not attract her attention. Losing patience, she stammered out:

"Tittler, path me the thithroth."

The other replied with indignation:

"Didn't ma say that oo shouldn't say anything?"

This was too much for the youngest and she exclaimed in a self-congratulatory tone:

"Neth good, I ain't thaid nothin'!"

See-Saw Policy.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Senator Allison, of Iowa, can probably hang further down on either side of a fence, without dropping, than any other man in Congress. Just now his phumies are sweeping the side that is paved with gold.

The music sounds melodious only while a speed of nine miles or less per hour is maintained; as soon as the speed is increased above that limit the sounds from the music cease to be agreeable to the ear and become inharmonious.

The music box indicates, therefore, fairly well when the exercise is becoming dangerous to the rider's health. The tin box containing the works is about ten inches diameter and four inches deep. The transmission is connected with the front wheel so as to allow for vibration or concussion. It can be started or stopped by means of a little lever attached near the handle. The same transmission serves to actuate a cyclometer which works independently of the music box and registers the distance traveled.

LETTING THE CAT OUT.

(From the Syracuse Standard.)

There were three sisters who lived very badly, and their mother, who was solicitous about finding husbands for them, was continually admonishing them to hold their tongues. One evening the three sisters were invited to "a quilting" at a neighbor's.

"Now, mind, girls," said the anxious mother, "be nice. Young men are going to be there, and you must not say a word, or they will learn that you lip and won't care to make 'up to you'."

They promised to be silent, and went to the quilting. When they reached the house they sat down and quilled diligently in silence, and nothing could induce them to take part in the conversation. At last the eldest wanted the scissors, and tried to make signs to her next sister to pass them to her, but could not attract her attention. Losing patience, she stammered out:

"Tittler, path me the thithroth."

The other replied with indignation:

"Didn't ma say that oo shouldn't say anything?"

This was too much for the youngest and she exclaimed in a self-congratulatory tone:

"Neth good, I ain't thaid nothin'!"

See-Saw Policy.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Senator Allison, of Iowa, can probably hang further down on either side of a fence, without dropping, than any other man in Congress. Just now his phumies are sweeping the side that is paved with gold.

REAR ADMIRAL BRAINE

One of the Heroes of Fort Fisher Is Dead.

Was in the First Naval Engagement of the War—Long and Honorable Career Closed.

New York, Jan. 29.—Rear Admiral Daniel Lawrence Braine, retired, U. S. N., died at his residence in Brooklyn this afternoon. He had been under the care of a physician since Friday night for heart trouble. He leaves a widow, who was Miss Mary E. Fulton, of Brooklyn, three sons, two of them married, and a daughter.

Rear Admiral Braine was born in New York on May 18, 1829. He entered the navy in 1846 as a midshipman, appointed from the new State of Texas, where he had lived for a year. He served through the Mexican war, saw service on the great lakes, and made two cruises before he graduated from Annapolis as a passed midshipman, in 1852. Before the opening of the rebellion his service carried him to the Mediterranean, to the southern coast of this country on survey duty, to Africa, to capture slaves, and in 1861 he had advanced to the rank of lieutenant.

He was appointed to the command of the Monticello, which the Union defense committee sent to sea in forty hours to provision Fort Monroe. He was in the first naval engagement of the war and saw heavy service all through it. He was recommended for promotion for his cool performance of his duty at Fort Fisher, Fort Anderson, and the fort of Cape Fear river, and was commissioned as commander in 1866.

He was in charge of the Ordnance Equipment Department of the navy yard at Brooklyn, from 1869 to 1873, in which year he commanded the Junata in her search for the Polar in the North and on the trip to Santiago de Cuba, where the 102 Virginian prisoners were received.

He was made captain in 1874 and commander in 1885. He commanded the South Atlantic as rear admiral in 1886. In 1889 he was appointed to command the Brooklyn navy yard and in 1891 he retired at the age of sixty-two. He had lived in Brooklyn since that time.

THE SNOW STORM.

It Extends From New England to South Carolina.

As the Weather Service sat on an icy throne congealing his flakes of snow, he summoned a wind from the frozen north which accounts for last night's blow. "The drift of my thoughts are to drifting snow," he mused, as he chuckled with glee, "and I'll cover old earth with the beautiful—I'll go on a jamboree."

And then the Sage got down to business. "Don't bother me," he said, to a reporter, who came in on a polar wave, "I'm engaged."

"Do you think tomorrow will be a cold day?" queried the newspaper emissary, with his eyes on the Sage, and his thoughts on a pair of yarn socks like mother used to knit.

"Nix!" responded the Sage, as he considered a consignment of goods to a pneumatic tube, and pushed it along.

"That," he continued, cheerfully, "is the snow. Perhaps you have heard that driven snow is white—so am I, and therefore I don't mind telling you the facts about this snowstorm. Outside of the fact that the snow is white, the Republican party, whose 'Car' proposes to shut off debate in the House tomorrow, the day will not be cold. I am informed you will readily understand that a storm central over the Republican party, only is neither broad in scope nor terribly disastrous."

"Well, I'll be bound," said the reporter, "the snow has long on the ground," queried the reporter.

"I prefer to reserve my prophecy on that point until after it has melted," grinned the Sage, as he resumed his business of shuffling down the stuff on which John G. Whittier's fame largely rests.

"Well, I'll be bound," said the reporter, "the snow has long on the ground," queried the reporter.

"You won't if you make a quick sneak and get out of here half as soon as I hope you will," declared the Sage. "I don't want to get into any hot water with business and not wishing to offend him The Times man left, after learning that the snow-belt extends from New England to South Carolina, and as far west as the Rockies."

THE WEEK IN THE HOUSE.

After the Teller Resolution Will Come Appropriation Bills.

Legislation that will attract the greatest general interest, to come before the House this week will be on the Teller resolution, to be disposed of today. The rest of the week will be devoted to appropriation bills, except on Friday, which is under the rules, private bill day. The district appropriation bill can be disposed of on one day if the attention of the members is given exclusively to it, but this will not be done, and time will be consumed in the committee of the whole by speeches in the condition of the country and the apparent want of prosperity, Cuba and free silver.

Immediately following the district bill the appropriation bill for forts and fortifications will come up, and it will probably be carried along to the last of the week, and perhaps into the week following.

WILTON'S CAVE DWELLER.

Residents Interested About a Good Looking, Intelligent Hermit.

Norwalk, Conn., Jan. 29.—Wilton has a cave dweller. He is a good looking fellow, of thirty-five or forty years, with dark hair and mustache, well and warmly dressed, and recently had new hip boots. He has resided in a small cave, under the shadow of a big bowlder, about half a mile from the Cannon railroad station, all this week, keeping up a constant fire of wood, of which there is abundance near, and subsisting on whatever he can forage in the neighborhood.

He will tell nothing of himself to those who approach him, but is not sparing of words, most of them abusive. A resident of Cannon called on him this morning. "I saw a fire over here and thought, 'I'd come over and see what was going on,'" he remarked, pleasantly.

"You knew well what was going on," was the reply, and the further conversation became too warm for the visitor's liking.

AMERICAN CARS FOR AFRICA.

Orange Free State Railway Company Places a Big Contract.

Bloomington, Pa., Jan. 29.—The Bloomington Car Manufacturing Company of this city has been awarded the contract to build 100 gondola cars for the Orange Free State Railway Company of South Africa. These cars will be equipped with entire steel frames and steel tired wheels.

For the same company fifteen passenger cars are to be fitted with forty inch steel tired wheels and will be similar to an American passenger car, excepting a little smaller. These will be the first cars of this description built in America for use in Africa.
